What is an immersion Feldenkrais Training?

Unlike many other methods or techniques, immersion into sensory experience is essential to learning the Feldenkrais Method®. An extended sensory exploration over a period of weeks allows for moving beyond your habitual way of being with yourself and in the world. Integral to becoming a Feldenkrais® Practitioner is this deeper knowing of yourself. Movement Educators provides a training format that supports immersion, satisfying the need for self-discovery which is foundational for practicing the method with others.

This training will offer hours above and beyond the required guild regulations, as well as beyond the extended hours Movement Educators have been offering. These additional hours will come in several forms. One, the Awareness Through Movement® and Functional Integration® practicums will be done outside of regular class hours. There will be Public ATM classes taught by Diana before or after class that will help demonstrate the difference between training and public lessons. These lessons will be studied and become a basic set of lessons provided to the students for their initial teaching experiences. Another innovative addition to this training will be sponsors (Feldenkrais Practitioners) supporting trainees between segments. Sponsors will be coached by Diana to keep these extra studies aligned with the training curriculum. Assignments outside of class will be supported by various forms of technology, such as a private Facebook training group for student and staff communication. Other complimentary hours will be added in the form of presentations by local authors in the fields of psychology, communication, writing, science and martial arts.
